

Anna H. Thompson
English War Bride
Queen Mary
September 16,
1946

The journey on the Queen Mary was fine for me but one day out it got rough and the lady in my quarters had a set of twin babies. She got very ill and I was able to help with the twins, quite a novelty for me. While arriving in Halifax we were a long time getting off the ship and when I did and found my luggage I couldn't find my husband. He had waited so long and decided to look for refreshments meanwhile. So he wasn't there when we finally disembarked. Not for long though, by the time it was time for supper, I was taken to a restaurant for a meal ordered by my hubby and I found a large ear of corn at the edge of my plate. "But that is chicken feed!!!", says I. "What do I do with that?" At the demonstration hubby got to eat both ears. Also being in civilian clothes and 1 1/2 year absence he didn't look like the man I married!! Never mind, 9 months later I delivered a baby girl!!