When I left England, it was a sad day leaving my family and friends behind but once we got moving things got better.

The food on-board was wonderful after five years of rations. When we arrived in Halifax, it was raining hard but people were on the dock waving and shouting and the band was playing. It really made me feel welcome. Everything was so well planned that we were off the boat and on to a train in a very short-time. Now that was wonderful seeing as there was hundreds of us on that old boat. Once on the train, we were on our way to our husband and new family. Little did we know it would take three days and nights to get there.

I've had a good life in Canada and have never regretted coming here.
