

Carp Kites - Koinobori

On children's day (May 5th) in Japan, families with children hang carp kites outside their homes: one for each child. The carp in Japan represents strength and determination.

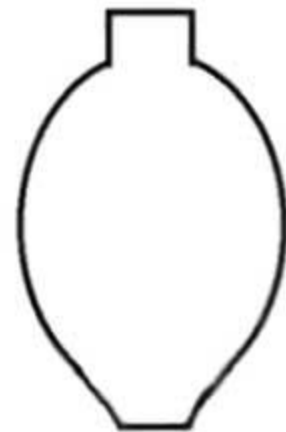

Materials:

- Large white copy paper
- Shiny patterned wrapping paper or streamer paper
- Markers
- Double-sided tape or glue
- Chopstick, popsicle stick, or dowel
- Red yarn

Instructions:

- Cut a large fish shape out of large white paper. There is no need to add the tail shape: it will come later. Extend the top for hanging. See image.
- Cut fin shapes out of wrapping paper or streamers. You can mix and match designs and colours as desired.
- Cut a tail shape out of coordinating wrapping paper.
- Lay out strips of double-sided tape, or apply glue, in lines across the fish body. Stick scales onto the adhesive in rows. Leave a small area of the top blank for the face.
- Attach the tail to the bottom of the fish.
- Using markers, decorate the face of the carp.
- Roll the end of the mouth around the stick and secure in place.
- Tie red yarn to each end of the chopstick to create a loop to hang your kite.

TIP: Streamers are the perfect width for scales so they are convenient to cut out. Wrapping paper, on the other hand, may provide some broader options for shine or pattern.
